

Week of July 21st, 2017

SiouxFalls.Business – Tea continues to expand, with more than 20 new home building permits issued this year-to-date and growing sales tax revenue. Multifamily housing continues to boom in the community, too.

Garretson Gazette – Restaurant O-So-Good has opened to high reviews from patrons, and its propensity to sell out of items confirms that. The opening night featured stand-up comedy and a three-course meal, and owner Omar Thornton anticipates similar events happening in the future.

SiouxFalls.Business – Jill Meier, former editor of the Brandon Challenger, has founded the Brandon Valley Journal: a weekly newspaper to be distributed on Wednesdays. Meier will also maintain a website and an advertising magazine where she hopes to showcase local businesses and news.

Lennox Independent – The City of Worthing received a $2500 grant to purchase an electronic scoreboard for the use of the Worthing Recreation Board.

SiouxFalls.Business – The Owners of Gypsy Trading Company in Brandon have expanded, building a retail center in the heart of Brandon and renting space to other small businesses. The new site allows Gypsy Trading Company to offer a number of Do-It-Yourself classes, too.

South Dakota Housing Development Authority – The State of South Dakota is conducting a survey to determine if any significant impediments exist to limit access to the housing market. Those who wish to complete the survey may visit www.surveymonkey.com/r/SDAI2017 to offer input.
